Weh Ilang Gayo G1 TP

Sumatra Green Coffee Beans | Genuine Origin

Weh Ilang coffee is grown in one of the highest valleys in the Takengon area, at approximately 1600 meters above sea level. Temperatures there can reach the freezing point at times. In the old days farmers would light fires in their farms to deter frost from happening, especially in the July-September season. Weather there is very unpredictable and snow sometimes falls late at night around 2 to 3 AM. Due to the weather and elevation, coffee from this area tends to take longer to ripen, which contributes to its bold, ripe fruit flavors, exquisite palm-sugar sweetness, and overall brighter, cleaner cup.
