Coffee Background

The Southern Nations, Nationalities, and People's Region (SNNPR) was a state in southwest Ethiopia that borders Kenya. At the time, it was home to over 45 indigenous ethnic groups. In the mid 2000s, the SNNPR was responsible for producing over 40% of Ethiopia's coffee volume. In 2023, the SNNPR was dissolved and divided into four regions, including Sidama.

Sidama is a fertile region in southern Ethiopia that spans across the highlands of Lake Awasa in the Rift Valley. The high altitudes that soar beyond 2000masl are where Arabica coffee trees grow and ripen slowly in the cool temperatures, resulting in complex flavor profiles and distinct aromas that are characteristic of Sidama green coffee. The region is home to nearly 8 million people with distinct cultures and traditions among 36 districts that encompass over 50 coffee cooperatives and around 200 washing stations.
